

HIGH PRIESTESS

herbal wellness for higher spirits

HOW THIS BRAND WAS BORN

The founder was drawing tarot cards late one night — working on naming a natural sexual wellness brand she'd built around clean, plant-based ingredients for intimacy and pleasure. She kept pulling the same card. Over and over. The High Priestess.

She stopped. Sat with it. The card is about piercing the veil — hidden things made visible, messages that come through when you slow down enough to receive them. The revelations mid-smoke. The honesty that comes when the noise quiets. The creative breakthrough. The intimacy that opens up. Cannabis — much like sexual pleasure — can be a portal. That thread runs from her very first product to everything we make now.

THREE THINGS CANNABIS CAN BE A PORTAL TO

- ✦ Ritual & Presence — A morning workout, a walk in the park, a journaling session. Cannabis as the thing that helps you actually arrive.
- ✦ Creativity & Clarity — The studio session, the creative breakthrough, the thought that finally makes sense. The plant as collaborator.
- ✦ Intimacy & Body — A solo evening, a partnered moment, heightened sensation. The vulnerability that opens when the walls come down.

THE CONSUMER WE'RE TALKING TO

There's a whole group of people who already consume cannabis as part of a ritual — a joint with morning coffee, a smoke before a stretch, a pre-journaling session — they've just never had a brand that spoke to how they actually use it. Plenty of brands exist for cheap weed or heavy hitters. HIGH PRIESTESS is for the ones the market has been ignoring. We're not reinventing the ritual. We're just finally showing up for it.

THE BRAND

Black- and woman-owned. Independent. Self-funded. Not a multi-million dollar out-of-state operation with a NY address — a real brand with a real origin story, built from the ground up in Brooklyn. Buy weed from women.

WHO IT'S FOR

Girlies, guys, gays, theys. Witches, travelers, artists, creatives, athletes, the curious. Anyone who wants great weed — whether they pull tarot cards before they light up or just want something premium that doesn't cost like it is. The brand holds both.

THE VALUE

7 × 0.7g prerolls per tin. ~5 grams of premium whole flower for $50. That's not a compromise — that's the point. Elevated in every sense. Accessible in price. Something worth buying again.

COMING SOON

MARCH 2026

Hash Infused Prerolls

Classic flower elevated with premium hash. More potency, same intentional approach. Same tin, new depth.

APRIL 2026

HIGH PRIESTESS

The Sales Toolkit

KNOW YOUR CUSTOMER

THE AESTHETIC ONE

Bought it because the tin looked different. Doesn't need the brand story — the packaging already did the work. Sell the quality.

THE FUNCTIONAL ONE

Wants great weed for a specific moment — morning, focus, wind-down. The effect names are their shortcut. Let them choose by mood.

THE RITUAL ONE

Already treats cannabis as part of a practice. Will feel instantly seen. Give them the origin story — they'll do the rest themselves.

THE VOLUME BUYER

Just wants good weed, consistently, at a fair price. Lead with: 7 prerolls, 0.7g each, ~5g total, $50. Premium without the premium markup.

SCRIPTS BY CUSTOMER TYPE

THE "JUST GOOD WEED" SHOPPER

Lead with product: "Small batch, whole flower — no shake, no filler. Brooklyn-processed. The tin is beautiful and the quality is consistent. 7 prerolls for $50."

→ Recommend Uplift or Center as entry points.

THE EFFECT / WELLNESS SHOPPER

Use the names: "These are organized by how you want to feel — Center for focus, Uplift for energy and movement, Unwind to release, Transcend if you want to go deep."

→ Ask: "What are you trying to feel?" Let them choose.

THE RITUAL / SPIRITUAL SHOPPER

Give them the story: "The brand was literally named after a tarot card the founder kept pulling. The whole thing is built around cannabis as a ritual tool — a portal, not just a product."

→ Point them to @highpriestess.cann and highpriestess.life — the world is there.

THE VOLUME / VALUE BUYER

Lead with the math: "Seven 0.7g prerolls in a tin — about five grams of whole flower for $50. Whole flower, not shake. Consistent quality every time. That's the deal."

→ Mention the tin keeps them fresh. Good for stocking up.

THE ANALYTICAL / SKEPTICAL SHOPPER

Go technical: "NY-licensed processor. Whole flower, not shake or trim. Third-party tested — COA on the label. Black- and woman-owned. Built here, not licensed in from out of state."

→ COA is on the packaging. Let it close.

OBJECTION HANDLING

"Is this for women?"

The name is bold and the brand channels feminine energy — but it's for everyone. Girlies, guys, gays, theys. Witches, athletes, artists, travelers, the curious. If the tin caught their eye, it's already speaking to them.

"Why this over a brand I already know?"

Most brands you see here are licensed in from out of state, and the vast majority of the entire market is male-owned. HIGH PRIESTESS was built from scratch in Brooklyn — self-funded, independent. The soul is in the product.

"What's the THC%?"

It's in the COA on the label. But honestly — effect is a better guide than a number. Each variety is strain-selected to hit the effect on the packaging, whether that's indica, sativa, or hybrid. The number is just one part of the story.

"I smoke flower, not prerolls."

Whole flower — no shake, no trim. Same quality as what you'd pack yourself, just already rolled. The tin keeps it fresh. Try one and see if you can feel the difference.

"I don't do the spiritual stuff."

You don't have to. The names are just effect cues — Center = focused, Uplift = energized, Unwind = released, Transcend = deep. The brand is there if you want it. It's just good weed if you don't.

"Is this a new brand?"

New to cannabis — building since 2022, processing in NY since 2025. The brand DNA has been there from the start. Hash-infused prerolls drop March 2026. Rosin edibles and vapes coming later this year.
